

A dark, weathered wooden door is set in a light-colored wall. The door has a series of circular and crescent-shaped holes cut into it, arranged to form a face. At the top, two crescent-shaped holes serve as eyes. Below them are two circular holes for a nose. A larger, crescent-shaped hole forms a wide, open-mouthed smile. The door has a metal latch on the right side and a wooden handle. To the right of the door, there is a dark wooden shutter with string lights hanging from it. The floor is made of reddish-brown tiles.

Smile? Smile!